"The anti-injunction bill, the contempt of court bill, the automatic compensation bill, and a great many other important bills will be considered, and there will be a great number of minor bills passed as usual. It is physically impossible to consider all of the 40,000 bills and resolutions introduced into a Congress, but I have no doubt that Congress will undertake to consider as many of them as possible."

On the Canadian matter, Mr. Clark said:

"Any statement by anybody that I ever said anything justifying the conclusion that I am, or ever was, in favor of forcible annexation of Canada is no only false, but absolutely preposterous "I have expressed the hope of a union of the two countries by mutual consent, and for the benefit of both, and did at Fremont, Neb., in answering a question from a man in the audience, say that nine-tenths of the people of the United States would welcome such a union by mutual consent, but part of my answer—that is, the part speaking of a union by mutual consent and for 'he henefit of both countries—was left out of the dispatch, and certain newspapers for political effect and to promote the fortunes of certain men, maliciously twisted what I said into a meaning contrary to what was meant.

District Legislation Promised Fair Show In Coming Session

The approaching session of Congress will not see any interference with the organic act, affecting the relations of the District and Federal government, in the opinion of Speaker Champ Clark, who promises District legislation a fair during the first regular session of show during the first regular session of the Sixty-second Congress.

The Speaker thinks the question is too big to tacki in a crowded session, as this is destined to be, although he said that perhaps improvements could be made in the law.

"Personally, I do not anticipate the act will be disturbed this session," said Mr. Clark. "A question of this importance would demand a great deal of thought and debate, and I do not think there should be any uneasiness over a possible change in the hear future."

The Speaker was guarded in his statements concerning District legislation in general, since he has not had opportunity since returning to Washington to survey the legislative field. He declared it would be the intention of the Democratic House to give District legislation all the show possible, consistent with the fact that this is to be a tariff session and an appropriation session.

No Extras Probable.

No Extras Probable. Asked whether the District would obtain any "extra days" for the consideration of legislation during the next session, Speaker Clark could make no session, Speaker Clark could make no promises, since District matters always consume considerable time and debate in the House. There was no disopsition, however, he said, to knock the District out of its regular days, and the House is willing to expediate District legislation as fast as it is presented.

Referring to the talk of a change in the organic act, Speaker Clark said:

"Legislation is generally prompted by some public demand. I have not sounded the situation sufficiently to know whether there is any great demand for a change in this act, but if not there probably will be no necessity for hurrying consideration of the question. As I save said, this is a matter to which Congress, if it takes it up must give much study, and I do not see that we will have time to consider it this year."

Advocating a money allowance for ofcial entertainment to relieve naval ofof personal payment, Secretary the Navy Meyer will say in his anal report:

Mickle by investigating the records, habits, and recent conduct of some of those whose words they are taking without confirmation in an effort to fasten all the guilt upon

James Smith, the only man who has been accused of either the assault on been accused of either the assault on Morris Bennett or, suspected of brutally murdering William H. Mickle, the Seventh street tobacco dealer with a monkey wrench, talked more frankly to a Times reporter in the District jail Sunday afternoon than with any one since his arrest one week ago. This was the first interview he has given since he has been confined in the jail, and in the course of random catechism Smith admitted, and later reiterated with emphasis, much that he has heretofore refused to admit. He likewise suggested where much additional information bearing on the charges against him can be secured.

credit themselves with, they ought to have seen long ago that some one is pretty anxious to have me put out of the way. I think that fact ought to arouse their suspicions. They might at least find out whether it is for their own protection or profit that these persons want to fasten every bit of criminal evidence that they can upon me."

"The police need rot go outside of their own office to get evidence against these men and they can find court records against them. There are at least a dozen persons who have known them for years a 3d who can tell the police which they fink would be most likely to commit these murderous assaults, these men who posed as my friends, or myself. Let them, for instance review the history of that notorious gambling joint at Chesapeake Beach that was closed by special act of the Legislature. I have heard one of these men boast that "by crooked work" he has in one night gotten more money out of a man than he could earn in six months.

"See, he doesn't look this way at all. That shows he must have done me dirt when they smile at me. I'm surprised at Bill, for he and I were always good pals, and he never had anything against me."

After lapsing into thought for a few minutes Smith chuckled and voluntarily made this comment:

"What fools they are to go trailing me through the woods. If I got that money that was stolen from Bennett, do you suppose I'd waste my time hiding it in the woods. You can bet your life I'd have been on my way, to putting as much distance as I could between the scene of the crime and myself."

Maryland Man May Spoil Smith's Plan To Establish Alibi

In his endeavor to persuade the police of Washington and Chicago that he is not the murderer of Louis Fallerdeau and John Grigel in the Windy City in the early fall of 1908, James Smith, held by the police of this city for assaulting Morris Bennett and on suspicion of murdering William Mickle, claims that he was in the vicinity of Washington at the time the Chicago murders were committed.

To a Times reporter in the jail yesterday, Smith gave the name of Edward Wilholte, a telegraph operator of this city, stating that he was working for Mr. Wilholte at the time the police claim he was in Chicago. It was while with Mr. Wilhoite, of Montello avenue, Maryland Park, that Smith is alleged to have shot and killed a young white man named Leo Miles. The killing of Miles took place on the morning of July 12, 1909, which was almost a year after the two murders in Chicago. These facts may hurt Smith's effort to prove an alibi of the two Chicago murders through Mr. Wilhoite.

When seen by a Times reporter, Mr. Wilhoite said: "I am not certain when Smith worked for me, but I am sure it was in 1909. He came, a typical tramp, and begged for something to eat and a place to sleep. I permitted him to sleep by barn. He did odd jobs about the house. While with me there was a great stir about some one stealing chickens in my neighborhood. When Smith killed Miles I went on his bond, but in October I was released from the bond, and then Smith left my premises."

It is thought that Smith in his efforts claim he was in Chicago. It was while

It is thought that Smith in his efforts to prove an alibi by Mr. Wilhoite, howed to put a new stumbling block in the way of the police, but the records show that he was with Mr. Wilhoite from June, 1999, until the following October. This was after the two men were murdered in Chicago.

Smith has repeatedly denied that he has ever been in Chicago, or that his name was Kabusta. It is understood that during the time he was held in Marlboro for the murder of Miles, he had asserted on a number of occasions that he had lived in Chicago.

Wedding Day Near, Drops Dead in Home

Invitations to the wedding of Dr. Josiah Bassett Trudgian to Miss Phoebe Lantermann, which was to have taken place December 6, are being recalled today, as the preparations for the funeral services of Dr. Trudgian, who died suddenly of heart disease at his home, 1509 Thirteenth street northwest, late yesterday afternoon, are being made. Arrangements for the funeral were not completed until late this afternoon. The ceremonies will be held in the Northminster Presbyterian Church either tomorrow or Wednesday. Members of the Masons, Spanish War Veterans, and the Typographical Union, of which organizations Dr. Trudgian had been a member, will attend the ceremonies, and interment will be at the old home of Dr. Trudgian in Charlestown, W. Va.

Dr. Trudgian, who was fifty-five years old, has been in the best of health and spirits, and shortly before the time of his death was making preparations for his approaching marriage to Miss Lanterman, who has been prostrated by the shock.

Yesterday afternoon he went to an upper room at his home, and in a short time his son, Andrew B. Trudgian. Josiah Bassett Trudgian to Miss Phoebe
